Asking the right question

What I learned is how if a question is closed it gives a lot less details then and open question. If you have an open question it leads you to more reasonable answers for the questions. when there are two right answers that aren't yes or no then it can be considered an Open question

For a project having a well developed open question it can lead you to more answers and can get your project more developed with details. I say this because if you get a lot more an an answer it can lead you to a better grade.
