

I learned that questions that involve deep thinking are often times open ended questions. They lead to more discussion and thought than closed questions.

This could help me when preparing for a project because I can think about what questions other people may ask which would then guide my thinking when making my project. This would be helpful.